Gil Villegas believes he is the right person for Congress because his entire life has been about serving people. His career started in the U.S. Marines, where he served during Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm. From there, he worked for the State of Illinois making sure contractors didn't cheat on their Minority Business Enterprise requirements. His work then led him to the Hispanic American Construction Industry Association, where he helped small businesses comply with regulations so they could build successful companies. Gil came back to serve the state as Chief of Staff for the Capital Development Board, where they embarked on a $3.9 billion capital program creating thousands of jobs in infrastructure. Since being elected Alderman in 2015, he's continued to work trying to afford the community opportunities, protection, and compassion.
